

Year 4 Anti-bullying.

Our book is called Troll Stinks. The goats find a phone and start to text mean messages to Troll. They take silly photographs and make prank calls. The story ends when the goats decide to try and take a photograph of Troll to post on the internet with an unkind comment. When they arrive at Troll's cave, they are surprised to see a small, lovely troll crying. She tells the goats that someone has been sending her mean messages and asks them who would be so cruel. They feel terribly guilty and tell the troll that it was them. The goats realise what a big mistake they've made and decide to get to know the troll. They make friends and play together.

In our lesson, we talked about keeping safe on line and how important it is to think carefully about what we type on games or messaging apps. We discussed different types of bullying and we know that bullying on line is called Cyber Bullying. We understand how serious bullying is and that we must never send mean messages to anyone.

In the afternoon, we played the compliments game. We had to give compliments to each other. Miss Auty chose people who we might not usually play with and we were really happy to hear some lovely things about ourselves from people we might not consider in our main group of friends. We made a huge paper chain of compliments and loved hearing all the nice things people said about us.

We know how important it is to be kind and understand that our words, either spoken or typed, can have a huge impact on someone's day.
