

Parent's
Questions

Should I let school know if my partner and I are having problems?

It is always worth letting school know if things are unsettled at home and there are changes even if this is temporary. Your children pick up on more than you think and they can sense stress within the home even if you are managing to shelter them.

We will always talk in confidence with you and never judge. We can keep an extra eye out for your child and make sure they are coping at school. We will always share things with you if we feel we need to.
